Mr. Doolittle's Modesty.

Excessive modesty is one of Mr. Doolittle's characteristics.

His singular name may have something to do with his temperament.

It was proper that the Philadelphia Convention should have a distinguished man to preside over its deliberations, such as they were.

Accordingly, after the preliminary organization was effected, the Hon. J. R. Doolittle was chosen President.

On taking the chair, the President said, among other things "peace hath her victories not less renowned than war."

He was right, for one of the triumphs of that peaceful Convention was,

the exclusion or forced withdrawal of Vandigham,

as also of Wood and Deane.

Before descending

upon the peace prospects, he accepted the position assigned to him with great diffidence.

Hear him. "For the distinguished honor of being called upon to preside over the deliberations of the Convention, I sincerely thank you.

I could have wished (but did not) that this responsibility (play what responsibility was involved when everything was cut and dry before going to work?) had fallen upon another."

Upon whom?

We know he had only to say, "I do not wish to serve," and five and forty eager aspirants would have been glad of the opportunity of filling the chair.

If Mr. Doolittle had contented himself with the above observation, his friends, in the midst of his wonderful humility, might have forgotten that he was there.

Recovering however, from the shock occasioned by his self-doubt, he indulged in a sentence or two of most extraordinary character.

Our readers will remember that for the purpose of effecting the delegates from South Carolina and Massachusetts entered the wigwam arm-in-arm.

In alluding to this highly edifying and somewhat dramatic by-play, Mr. Doolittle said: "If they, the people of the United States, could have seen as we saw, Massachusetts and South Carolina by their full delegations coming arm-in-arm into this great Convention, if they could have seen this body, greater in numbers and in weight of character and brains, than ever yet assembled on this continent, under one roof"—"there would be no struggle at the polls in the coming contest." Certainly it is this declaration was true, there is no possibility that some other person should have been made President, for it was, in that event, entirely too bad to insist upon such a sacrifice of feeling. Just think of it? Doolittle and Deane in contrast! Doolittle presiding over brains! Deane not offended in the least, and willing (as there was no help for it) to have Doolittle for a Mentor! There was not "character" only at the Convention, but "weight of character" and "brains" combined, and more of these things than the continent ever saw at once under one roof; but whether of slate, the single or grained Mr. Doolittle did not say. Consider the Doolittle logic. If the people could only have seen the marching delegates—this constitutes the premises—"there would be no struggle at the polls in the coming election"—this is the conclusion. We are not certain whether the speaker alluded to the full election in Pennsylvania, or to the next choice for the Presidency, nor are we certain whether there would be no struggle because all would vote the Union or the Democratic ticket. The Doolittle prescription for a successful people is to see the South Carolina and Massachusetts delegates arm-in-arm, and then there must of necessity come a political infarction. The process is very simple; the result exceedingly doubtful. Let Mr. Doolittle befit himself as much as he chooses; it is a free country.

Notes as We Find them.

General William Cogswell was appointed postmaster at Salamanca, New York, recently, but he returned the commission to the Postmaster General, declining the appointment, as it would conflict with a political party with which he is not in sympathy.

General Win. Cogswell entered the service as Captain in the 2d Massachusetts Volunteers Infantry, which left Boston for the war May 1, 1861, and four years from that day marched with Sherman's triumphant army through Richmond.

The fame of the "Second Mass." is known by all men. There was never a better regiment for fighting or one which did more. It graduated Major-General Granger, Brigadier-General Andrews, and Brevet-Brigadier-General Wm. Cogswell, and many other officers of note. Colonel Shaw, of Fort Wagner memory, was a captain of its original organization.

The "Second Mass." poured out no stinted stream of its life-blood at Cedar Mountain, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, and on the numerous battle-fields between Chattanooga and Atlanta. Two of its brave officers were killed at Vicksburg, N. C., March 17, 1865.

Brevet-Brigadier-General Wm. Cogswell was promoted at Savanna, in January, 1865, and placed in command of the 3d Brigade, 3d Division, 20th Army Corps. His refection of the bribe of the Sultan postoffice proves that he is going to "vote as he fought."

A NEW INSTRUMENT FOR MEASURING OIL.—Fickett & Wig have invented an oil register for indicating the amount of oil drawn off from a tank, so that in filling tanks cars or barrels, the use of the gauging rod is dispensed with entirely, while the accuracy of its measurements is such to provide its decided superiority over the ordinary system of gauging now in use among our oil shippers.

It is a very simple arrangement, connected with the tank in such a manner as to enable the operator to observe at a glance the amount of oil that passes through it, without being liable, by any conceivable possibility, to get out of order and to go on indicating a wrong result. A model has been sent to Washington with an application for a patent, and another model will soon be completed and ready for exhibition, of which due notice will be given.

The thing cannot be very expensive, and to those producers who sell by the gallon—the only sensible plan, as we have contended for several months—it will be invaluable and indispensable article, obviating the necessity of gauging every cast, while it affords to the dealer the estimation of knowing with mathematical exactness the amount of oil that he handles.

The oil refiners on Oil Creek, will hold a meeting at Oil Exchange Hotel, Boyd Farm, on Thursday next, to take into consideration the proposed plan of having enabled on each receipt a $1,000 dollar Internal Revenue inspection.

Such an outrage should not easily submit to. As well have an inspector to each cigar manufacturer, or each barrel manufacturer. It is a monstrous attempt on the part of the mammoth refineries to engulf all the smaller concerns, as but few establishments could well afford to pay an inspector such a salary. Every man who burns gallon of kerosene is interested in this matter.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.—By an advertisement in our special notice column, it will be seen that Colored F. W. Ames, as Receiver, offers for sale on the 12th of September, next, the Petroleum Bank building. The property is too well known to need a description. It is one of the best located buildings in the city. We hope some appreciative buyer will secure the property at its value, as every dollar added to the assets helps the depositors. Colonel Ames is taking all possible means to secure to the creditors as large a dividend as can be made out of the property of the bank.

Internal Revenue.

We give to-day the income in the second division of this Collection District, comprising Titusville, Oil Creek, Renau and Centerville, as published in the Titusville Republican:
